RIDC is an interdisciplinary research hub centered primarily on the humanities and social sciences, including archaeology, history, anthropology, economics, sociology, and philosophy.

By facilitating close collaboration with researchers in various scientific fields at Okayama University and other institutions in Japan and abroad, RIDC aims to contribute to the construction of a sustainable society by clarifying the complex dynamics of how social organizations, technologies, beliefs, economics, and the arts are interrelated and how they change the way people live.

Prof. Naoko Matsumoto, Director of the Institute, now leads a large-scale research project "Out of Eurasia" which includes research activities in ASEAN countries.

Parisa Supitayakul

Graduate school of Natural Sciences and Technology, Division of Industrial Innovation Sciences
Okayama University is a wonderful place to study in Japan. The university places great emphasis on international students both in normal and critical situations. The teachers, staff, and friends are all very kind. I can say that there is a pleasant environment. The campus of the university is near to the city but it is full of nature. I would recommend it.
